

Call for Abstracts

Workshop:

“The Conflict of Mechanism and Teleology in Kant's Critique of Judgment”.

When: May 26-27, 2025

Where: University of Luxembourg, Institute of Philosophy

Submission deadline: 15 March 2025

Notification of acceptance: 25 March 2025

While Kant's perspective on organic nature is original and rich, it is at the same time challenging in various respects. Of particular interest is the "Dialectic of Teleological Judgment" and its antinomy. Recent years have seen a controversial discussion about what exactly the antinomy is, what its resolution looks like, and what kind of ontological commitments it requires. At this workshop we aim at taking up this debate by not only exploring textual difficulties and possible solutions to these difficulties but also by examining the systematic place of the "Dialectic of Teleological Judgment" in Kant's philosophy more broadly construed. Topics include but are not limited to:

- What exactly is the antinomy of the power of judgment?
- What is the resolution of the antinomy of the power of judgment?
- What are the ontological commitments of the “Dialectic of Teleological Judgment”?
- The systems of purposiveness of nature.
- Universal mechanism of matter.
- How is the purposiveness of nature related to transcendental idealism?
- Nature’s causality: technica intentionalis and technica naturalis.
- Idealism and realism of purposiveness.
- Kant and Spinoza in the “Dialectic of Teleological Judgment”.
- Human and intuitive understanding.

Speakers:

- Kristina Engelhard (Trier)
- Ido Geiger (Ben Gurion)
- Julian Grewe (Luxembourg)
- Karen Koch (Basel)
- Peter McLaughlin (Heidelberg)
- Marcel Quarfood (Umeå)
- Siegfried Roth (Cologne)
- Dietmar Heidemann (Luxembourg)
- Lorenzo Spagnesi (Trier)

Submission of abstracts of 700 words (max.), prepared for blind review, until 25 March 2025 at: julian.grewe@uni.lu. At least one time slot available. Allocated time: 30 minutes for presentation, followed by 30 minutes of discussion. Please include your name, institutional affiliation, and the title of the submission in the main body of the email. We will cover up to 3 nights of accommodation plus a conference dinner. We cannot, however, reimburse any travel expenses.

Notification of acceptance will be sent: 25 March 2025.

Dietmar Heidemann

-----

Professor of Philosophy
University of Luxembourg
1. Vorsitzender der Kant-Gesellschaft